The seniors had entered college with a show of Punjabi dhol and dancing at 11.00 a.m. which indeed was a surprise for the rest of the students. The programme had begun at 12.00 p.m. after all the seniors entered and visited all the stalls set up by juniors at the science quadrangle. The event commenced with the dignitaries addressing the graduating students followed by an inaugural dance. It was filled with dance, music, songs, skits and the colours of a carnival. There were engaging performances by the juniors which didn't fail to impress the audience and as a matter of fact, did get the seniors emotional at points. There was a room of reminiscence set up in the biochemistry block so that the seniors could relive their journey at college through a series of pictures and videos that were projected. Overall, it was a day filled with joy and emotions for everyone who was going to graduate and also for those who would dearly miss them. Report on “Most Promising Fresher” Final Round (2018-19):

The final 21 contestants were selected after a grueling elimination process. The top final contestants possess talents beyond measure. Singing, dancing, fitness, public speaking skills... the list goes on and on. The final three rounds conducted on stage were specially designed to test their speaking and communication skills, their spontaneity and the ability to give bright answers for the tricky questions posed at them. The Final 21 walked the ramp with grace in their gait, looking stunning in their maroon attire. They were judged on confidence, attitude, posture and style. This was followed by the intro round. They had to introduce themselves in the most unique way possible. There were quite colorful and entertaining intros, it was a tough task for the judges to make a decision. One of the contestants gave his introduction in French and another contestant rapped his intro. Almost half of the contestants were eliminated in this round. The second round was the talent round. There were singers, dancers, speakers and actors who set the stage on fire with their amazing performances. The competitors were judged based on audience enthusiasm, skill, confidence and the overall stage presence. Only six remained for the final round. The final round was the question round. Each contestant was posed a certain unique thought provoking question. One student was asked the principle that she lives by. Another student was asked what she would do to change the present Education System. The winner's question was, what would be his case if the 75% compulsory attendance guideline was removed. His answer was "I cannot answer for all students as they all have a different perspective about how they see their subjects, but most of the BA students, especially I, love the subjects. So I would attend all of my classes with the same eagerness and enthusiasm as before. So even if attendance was not compulsory, I would still attend classes and maintain healthy attendance." This answer won Chirag Kapoor the title of "Most Promising Fresher".
